FOUNDER LESSONS

Honest lessons from building Lorework so far.

Four things I keep coming back to.

LESSON 1

The problem matters more than the technology.

It’s more useful to sit with the question of what a team is actually tired of doing, and start there.

LESSON 2

Saying no is part of the product.

Being clear about what Lorework doesn’t do yet builds more trust than stretching to cover everything.

LESSON 3

Feedback loops still win.

Short cycles, real conversations, and changing course when you learn something.

LESSON 4

It’s worth asking for help early.

Most people are generous when you’re specific about what you need.